Have you watched the Disney movie Tangled (《长发公主》)? It tells the story of Princess Rapunzel, who is famous for her long hair.

Elsie Kennedy, 14, from the Scone Grammar School in Australia, loved Rapunzel very much. She started growing her hair down to her waist (腰) when she was a little girl. Over time, her goal changed. She wanted her long hair to be made into a wig for a child with cancer. She got her hair cut for the first time at her school in 2024. Then, she gave her hair to a place called Wig 4 Kids in Australia.

"I've never had a real haircut—my first trim (修剪) was at 7, and since (自从) then, just a small trim," Kennedy told Kids News. "I'm excited to get a new look, but I'm also very happy that my hair will go to a good cause (事业)." What's more, Kennedy is raising funds (基金) for other kids with cancer. Last weekend, our whole family ate outside. We sat down and waited at a restaurant. After a while, the dishes started coming one by one. After finishing all the dishes, I found it hard to eat any more. Then, the ice cream cake came to the table. At that moment, I felt lighter and enjoyed the delicious cake. But wait, why do I have space for it?

To answer the question, let's think about two other ones first. What's your favourite food? And would you like to eat it every day? Imagine that you could keep eating your favourite food for two days. Sounds good, doesn't it? Now, let's have the food for five days, and then ten days. You may not want to eat it any more. You can't wait to try something different.

Dessert is usually the last dish during a dinner. After eating a lot, you may become less interested in the same kind of food. At this point, a dessert comes in as a different kind. Your brain makes you want to try something new. It is because of dopamine (多巴胺). When you eat dessert, your brain gives out dopamine. It will make you want more sweet things. So the dopamine "gives" new space for more dessert.

Of course, because dessert is so delicious, we must be careful not to overeat. Too much of anything can be bad for your health!

14. How did the writer feel before the cake came?

- A. Full. B. Light. C. Empty. D. Interested.

15. What does "it" refer to (指代) in Paragraph 2?

- A. The nice dish. B. The ice cream. C. The delicious cake. D. The favourite food.

16. Which is right according to the passage?

- A. Dessert is usually the first one during a dish. B. The brain makes people try the same thing.
C. Too much dessert is not good for our health. D. Dopamine keeps people away from sweet food.

17. What is the passage mainly about?

- A. Why dessert makes people happy. B. Why people eat more at a restaurant.
C. Why dessert is the writer's favourite. D. Why people have space for dessert.

Natural wonders crying aloud for help

The Dead Sea could die!

I'm not a sea but a lake. And I'm not dead. In fact, I've got many plants and animals. I'm saltier than any sea, so people can lie on my surface. Rivers flow into me. But now people take too much water from them. My water level is going down. I am becoming smaller year by year. Take less water, or I'll dry up within the next 100 years. Then I really will be dead!

Rainforest - forest ≠ rain

I'm the rainforest of Madagascar. As my name suggests, I make rain for my plants and animals, such as monkeys, snakes and many kinds of flowers. For 80% of them, I'm their only home in the world. However, people are cutting down my trees for wood and to make space for farming. Please stop it. I'm disappearing.

If Frozen turns into Waterworld...

I'm a glacier at the Glacier National Park in America. It's a land full of ice and snow. Do you want to explore the white world in the film Frozen? Then my home is the best choice. Two hundred years ago, there were about 150 glaciers. But now, there are around 25. Please stop climate change. I'm turning into Waterworld.

18. What is special about the Dead Sea?

- A. Its water level is rising. B. It is saltier than any sea.
C. No animals can live in it. D. It is the largest lake in the world.

19. What is happening to the Madagascar rainforest?

- A. People are planting more trees there. B. All the animals are leaving the forest.
C. The rain is making the forest grow bigger. D. People are cutting down trees for wood and farms.

20. Why does the glacier say "I'm turning into Waterworld"?

- A. Because it is raining more often. B. Because people are swimming there.
C. Because climate change is melting the ice. D. Because it is becoming a popular water park.

21. What is the main problem discussed in the passage?

- A. The weather is getting warmer.
B. Pollution is killing animals and plants.
C. These places are becoming popular for tourists.
D. Human activities are causing problems to nature.

Hello! I'm Zoe. When I was young, my grandma taught me to garden. We planted carrots, strawberries and roses in her backyard. It was so much fun! Gardening made our family closer and gave us happy memories.

Gardening is fun but not always easy. Sometimes I make mistakes like giving plants too much water, not enough sun, or not caring for the soil. This makes me sad, but I learn from them. I read books and ask other gardeners for help. Now I'm better at it!

Gardening is special because:

We eat fresh food from our garden. Tomatoes taste better than store ones!

When I garden, I forget worries. Touching soil and watching plants grow makes me happy.

It protects nature: We collect rain to save water, bees visit our flowers, and we improve the soil.

Try gardening! It makes you stronger. Like my grandma says: "Plants need time to grow."

How do you spend your weekends? For many young people, they go to the cinema with friends, have dinner out, or go shopping. This was once the routine (常规) for Zhang Yiling, a 27-year-old girl from Shanghai. But three years ago, fresh out of university and starting her first job, Zhang realized that her idea of "relaxing weekends" nearly turned into "spending money". If she didn't spend money on weekends, she wouldn't know what relaxing activities to do. Because of this, Zhang began to look for other ways to enjoy weekend life, not just shopping.

To make a change, Zhang and 26 friends built up The Lifespark Group in 2025. They started a project called "Make Your Weekend a True Break". By doing surveys, they found many surprising ways to enjoy weekends, such as dancing and exercising in a park square. Joining book clubs, watching movies at home, or even becoming a model for free photos.

Zhang herself also began to pay closer attention to the interesting things around her. She found that a flower shop near her home gave free lessons on weekends. She learned about how to pick fresh flowers and grow plants. "I take care of my plants and flowers every day. I enjoy looking at them growing strong. That makes me feel relaxed."

"I hope that our project can make more people know what they really want and how to use money in a right way", said Zhang. Let's go to the library to read about different lives we never experience and visit museums to learn about history or culture. We can also spend an afternoon looking through old pictures with our family."
